

Website conditions of use

We can't guarantee that the webpage is always without any errors or omissions. If you feel there is something incorrect or omitted then please contact Sara Jones as soon as possible.

The content may also change from time to time as the Learning Management System updates itself and we will endeavour to let users know of significant changes but something may be changed without formal communications as it may be deemed not necessary.

There may be occasions when the webpage is unavailable beyond our control. We will endeavour to avoid this at all times.

We cannot take responsibility for your internet access or age of your device which may affect your ability to access a course. We cannot take responsibility for any computer viruses.

Your access password to courses is for your use to access a course and should not be passed on to other people.

The content of the website belongs to Sara Safety Solutions and any unauthorised broadcasting of video content would be in breach of copyright.

We cannot take responsibility for any loss of business or sales or other consequence in connection to our webpage use.
